PROJECT SNAPSHOT

TOXFREE USE HIGH PRESSURE WATER BLASTING TO CLEAN OUT SPRAY BOOTHS

Paint build-up on the spray booth floor.

The solution

Toxfree provide ultra-high pressure water blasting as part of their industrial services division. Ultra-high pressure water blasting was the best solution for removing the built-up paint from the surfaces of the room. Using 36000 psi, the paint was stripped from the walls and floor to reveal the base of the building, ready to be refurbished. Toxfree completed the job with stringent safety precautions, making sure no one could enter the room during the process. The excess paint and water from the room was contained and then vacuumed up with a Toxfree vacuum loading truck.

Walls and floor clean and ready to re-paint.

The issue

Oliver Technologies required spray booths to be cleaned out, ready to be refurbished. The spray booth is used to spray paint large transformers, the transformers enter on rail tracks, are painted and then exit again. The booth had not been cleaned out in 5 years, which meant paint had accumulated on the walls and floors during this time. The thick layer of paint was creating an OHS hazard as the floor was no longer level.

Walls being cleaned with High Pressure water.

The outcome

Oliver Technologies were happy with the exceptional service provided by Toxfree, the spray booth was stripped down and ready to be used safely again. The waste vacuumed up by the Toxfree vacuum truck was transported to its disposal location at a Toxfree waste treatment facility. Toxfree will work with Oliver Technologies to clean out the spray paint booth once a year, to avoid a build-up of paint and to reduce the OHS risk.
